Earlier this week, farmworkers with the Coalition of Immokalee Workers (CIW) won a landmark agreement with McDonald's to improve the wages and working conditions of farmworkers who pick its tomatoes. This momentous victory was achieved through two years of escalating pressure by the CIW and its allies, and comes two years after the CIW and Taco Bell reached a similar agreement.

While the McDonald's campaign has come to a successful end, the Campaign for Fair Food is far from over. The focus is now on Burger King, who has rejected working with the CIW to address human rights abuses in the fields. Join Florida farmworkers and thousands of consumers like you this Saturday in Chicago for this colorful and festive celebration of our victory and announcement of the next exciting phase of the campaign!
